Our own situation undoubtedly needs careful handling. Indestions are already visible that France is buying bills here, in spite of our higher rates. The double effect of these purchases is to neutralize the influence of the bank's advance in rate, and to give France power to take gold from this market later on, if wanted for the Russian lean or for other purposes. In this councetion, it is now believed that Russia's portion of the Chinese indemnity beam may be issued in raiss. Russia's own Government loan will, of course, he placed there.

With such an outlook, any decisive activity on our stock exchanges is impossible util matters in South Africa improve. Still, most people believe the usual end-of-the-year raily in prices to be probable.

Mermaids and Mummies Among the Bargains at "Stevens."

There is a spot in London where the prehistoric and the modern jostle each other in a way that is at once curious and amusing. Everybody has heard of "Stevens", a fairly large slice of the population has visited the famous reading

Mr. Stevens showed the writer the largest bird's egg in existence. It represed in a case by the side of a hest of humming bird's eggs, the smallest known. The giant specimen is scientifically indexided as the "aepyorals maximus." The bird has long been extinct. It is really the read to the "Arabian Night," repaired to have been capable of flying off, not only with men, but with the dephant and ritasecross. The egg in pessession of Mr. Stevens is equal to 240 of those haid on the London breakfast table.

One of the most important commissions unsertaken at "Stevens" was the selling of Lord Derby's menagerie of 345 mammals and 1.272 birds, including a number of English-bred eraus.

Mention of the latter bird recalls the memorable dinner given by Mr. Stevens at the Camera Club, when an omelette made from an emo's egg fald in England was the most novel item in an altogether uncommon mean. The shell has been elaborately mounted in gold as a memorate of the granteer.

It is somewhat startling us one situation there listening interestedly to Mr. Stevens to hear a phonograph, resting on a sareophagus that contains the mummified remains of a relative of Protemy II, suddenly break out into a tune which the Loriou street boy is just now whistling. The two articles in such close justaposition seem to condense the world's history of the past 2,00 years.

Mr. Stevens' knowledge of mummydom has brought him a new experience.
